L.A. WEEKLY'S VALENTINE'S DAY GUIDE TO SEXY WEED

 JIMI DEVINE × FEBRUARY 10, 2020

It's that time of year when we try to augment our sex lives with chocolate and weed.

In the spirit of St. Valentine, we have enough THC-laced chocolate on this list — some strong, some artisan — to give half of L.A. County diabetes, all at the top of the pack right now in California's crowded infused confectionery space.

But there is lube too, in case you're on the hunt! Pretty much everyone on this list has won legit awards or been given major accolades by various publications, but if there is a hemp lube award, my bad, it flew under my radar.

Nevertheless, these options are the perfect Valentine's Day fit for that special someone regardless of their plumbing or sexual identity. And they can also be great for forgetting you don't have one.

Get You Baked Goods: Kaneh's Brownies

Kaneh is a family-owned bakery providing to the California adult-use market. The fruit chews and other sweets coming out of their bakery are legit. While they don't have any fast-acting qualities and won't put down a rhinoceros, they are certainly a great representation of one of the most classic edibles in cannabis. Kaneh's brownies are a great option for those who only want to dip their toes in the fountain of weed sex since they only have 10 milligrams of THC.
