

The Best Cannabis Edibles to Order in San Diego Right Now

Not all edibles are created equal.

MARCH 30, 2020

0 SHARES

Edible products have come a long way since the state of California legalized recreational cannabis. Instead of a slim selection of chalky chocolate bars, difficult to dose brownies, and gummy candy clones, local dispensaries are now fully stocked with high-quality goods to satisfy the most discerning consumer.

San Diego-based cannabis companies like Platinum Confections and Kaneh Co. are among the local leaders, while long standing high-end producers like Kiva Confections continue to evolve and grow their product lines.

To facilitate safe shopping during the current public health crisis, many dispensaries are offering online ordering for pick-up in addition to free local delivery (with minimum purchase).

Kaneh Co.

Kaneh Co.'s recipes are developed by Rachel King, a bone fide pastry chef who spent years dreaming up desserts for high-end restaurants and is now applying those same skills to make delicious cannabis infused edibles. Chef-quality items like cookies, brownies, blondies, and caramels make this San Diego-based company stand out.

New items that have debuted since we first covered this forward-thinking company include red velvet cookies, toasted coconut caramels, and PB&J blondies.

The extensive selection also includes gluten-free and vegan options, including fruit jellies made with real fruit and no gelatin. Keep an eye out for new flavors, including strawberry apple, raspberry lemonade, and guava tamarind.

Top picks

The Best of Both Worlds Brownies are always a great choice. Other brownie options include triple chocolate, s'mores, and peanut butter fudge.

Fruit jellies are easy to digest and offer a nice balance of sweet and tart flavors.

Order

Available for pickup at Torrey Holistics, SDRC, Harbor Collective, and others See the full list at kanehco.com.